WHAT YOU DO IN COLLEGE MATTERS
A recent study showed that the most successful students are those who participate in undergraduate experiences such as internships, undergraduate research, and service learning. These engaged learning opportunities allow you to take what you learn in the class and apply it in the real world. Through these experiences, you will also gain unparalleled opportunities to hone your critical thinking and communication skills. More importantly, these opportunities pay dividends well beyond graduation, which is why you will find many engaged learning opportunities whether you’re a freshman, sophomore, junior or senior.
